Excerpt from The Commercial Products of India: Being an Abridgment of "the Dictionary of the Economic Products of India" I may venture to explain that an effort has been made to render all trade statistics on the standards of English weights and measures, and while giving the rupee values to state now and again the equivalents in pounds sterling (18. 4d. To the rupee). Unfortunately, by the time the press order had to be given, official returns later than 1905 - 6 were not as a rule available for all aspects of trade, so that while incidentally quoting such returns as were to hand of a later date, the main contentions of the work turn on the positions attained in 1905 - 6.
